In the collection, The Beautiful Couple and Other Stories, acclaimed novelist Lawrence Naumoff (awards from The National Endowment for the Arts, The Whiting Foundation, a NYTimes Notable Book of the Year, and more) begins with a long story about a happily artsy, somewhat bohemian styled couple in Chapel Hill, who are, as students, mythologized by their friends as the beautiful couple everyone wants to be like. After graduation, they go to Mexico, to the Pacific coast, and stay in a house, overlooking the ocean, with a famous writer and his two women. Eventually they return to Chapel Hill, and the story follows them in the decade from the late sixties to the late seventies. From the story: This is the best year of their life. When they graduate, everybody in their crowd comes to their house and spills out into the woods and ravine for a going away party that lasts for days. They love each other, all the people there do, so much. They all cry at the party, and they cry a lot, thinking about going away and never seeing each other again and how everything will change. The crying feels so sad its beautiful, its like art, their lives have been art, they didnt even know it would be that way, but it happens, and the party goes on until everyone has to leave town. Other stories include a Hemingway spoof titled Men Like White Elephants, as well as Tex Gets Married in Arkansas, Fascinating Rhythm, circa 1953, Revolutionaries, Peruvian Goddess Crab Cakes, and, Taking Your Girl Friend Home to Meet Your Family and Shes Pregnant and Its 1973 and Shes Methodist and Youre Definitely Not and Your Mother Will Cry.
