

A New Atmosphere

[...]married, is the essence of the lesson. Laying aside now all question of the dignity and delicacy of such proceedings, assuming for the time that it is the proper course, let us notice whether it is followed out to its conclusions. Not in the least. Having done its best to transpose the feminine raw material into the orthodox texture and pattern of good wives, society lays it on the shelf to run its own risk of finding a purchaser. It neither provides husbands for the good wives which it has made, nor suffers them to go and look up husbands for themselves. If a girl is ready to enter service, she can[...].
