

France to Japan Overland via the Trans Siberian and Trans Mongolian Railways

Across Europe, Russia and China by rail on the Trans Siberian/Trans Mongolian railways. This is the story of a journey planned and executed by two people who refuse to believe that age (any age) is a barrier to doing what you want to do. Frequent travellers to Australia, they decided to eschew the usual means of distance travel, and leaving their home on the French Riviera, travelled by train to Shanghai in China, and then by local ferry to Japan, before boarding a (shortish) flight to Sydney. They crossed France, Germany, Poland, and Belarus before entering Russia and boarding a train to travel along the famous Trans Siberian and Trans Mongolian railway to take them via Mongolia to Beijing and thence to Shanghai. The journey was planned using the internet to make the arrangements. This book explains how you too can arrange a similar journey without the need to resort to agencies and guided escorted tours. In the first part of the book they explain how to organise the trip, with web addresses, and tips to make the planning and the trip itself almost as easy as booking a flight. In the second part you can read the blog that they posted with photographs at every opportunity along the way.
