

On the Paths of a Grieving Past: Pilgrimage to Historic Armenia (Armenian Edition)

Despite enduring a series of spiritual vicissitudes, the author eventually overcomes all prejudices and decides to embark upon a journey to the lands of his parents and forefathers: Historic Armenia and Cilicia. As a pilgrim, traveler and investigator, on three occasions between 2011 and 2014, the author visits nearly every plundered region of his nations ancestral homeland. During his odyssey, the author arrives at the realization that Historic Armenia is the fatherland of every Armenian, irrespective of the fact that it was pilfered from his nation by way of violence and genocide. In fact, the majority of present-day inhabitants, whose grandfathers willing or unwillingly, by the thousands, executed the eradication of the Armenian nation and the dispossession of its three millennia-old homeland, have nearly no connection with this land and its sacred relics. During his travels in the fatherland, the author engages in man-to-man and heart-to-heart conversations with the progeny of the pilferers of his ancestral lands, and notices traces of remorse and repentance through the eyes and uttered narratives of many of his interlocutors. Throughout his journey, heroic and tragic episodes of both the distant past and recent memory accompany the author, and transmit a breath of soul and spirit to the hills and meadows, cliffs and rivers, and to the scarred historical structures, soil, and stones of his homeland
