

An Account of the Island of Mauritius: And Its Dependencies (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from An Account of the Island of Mauritius: And Its Dependencies My Lord, Your Lordship having appointed me as a Special Magistrate for the Mauritius, I am indebted to that circumstance, for whatever knowledge or information I possess of the Colony; and to you therefore, I respectfully beg leave to dedicate this account of the Island and its dependencies. It is a well known fact, that of all the British possessions, less is known of the Mauritius generally, than of any other of our Colonies; and when the vast National and Commercial consequence of the Island is considered, whether in reference to produce or her important position, In relation to our East India possessions and Trade, is a matter of surprise. Should this brief account of the Island and its dependencies meet your Lordships approval, and add towards the better knowledge of this interesting possession, my object will be attained.
